From The Coach:

Some years the team's success can be seen in the box scores. In other years we judge it by the progress of our individual team members. As we entered the season with a team composed primarily of freshmen, we said we were embarking upon a three-year program because our new people seemed to be a intelligent group who, given three years to develop, should give us a very good team.

As my college English professor liked to say, "Many are called and few are chosen." Given some of our failed reclamation projects of past years, we have been less inclined to tolerate team members who, early on, prove that they are unwilling to give the team the commitment necessary to become good sailors. But we have come to the end of the fall season with "many" rather than "few" who have been chosen.

Will Summers, Jessica Burlaw and Will McCabe have shown promise as skippers for the future. Janis Lavine, Heather Sutton, Kate O'Conner, and Mark Stephens have all given us rapidly improving crew work. Team captain, Justin Ailsworth, in addition to sailing well for us, has contributed to the development of his crew, Pete Foytik, so well that Pete will be taking the helm of his own boat for the spring. Last year's Top Crew, Paula Davis continues as one of our most valuable people along with Joe Ambrogne who has become one of our best developers of new crews. The return of Valerie Guinn has been a real help as well. While these team members have stood out, every member of the team has made significant contributions.

This is a group of sailors who have proven their commitment and who Jim White, our assistant coach, and I consider to be exceptional young men and women. They are a "team" in the best sense of the word and they are a pleasure to take on the road. Most importantly, they are all good representatives of the university. While we may not have a long collection of top-level finishes on which to look back this fall, we do have good reason to look forward to the spring with genuine and justifiable optimism.
